

2026 MUNICIPAL ELECTION

WHICH DIVISION DO I VOTE IN?

Use this quick guide to help determine your voting division in a Saskatchewan rural municipality.

Step 1 • Do you live in the RM?

YES → You vote in the division where you live, even if you own land in another division.

NO → Go to Step 2.

Step 2 • Do you qualify through property in the RM?

Property in ONE division → Generally, you vote in that division.

Qualifying property in MORE THAN ONE division → Generally, you vote where your total assessed value is highest. If the assessments are tied, the lowest-numbered division applies.

An earlier written designation of a division may change this result. Special rules may also apply to spouses, jointly assessed property, and permitted mobile homes. Ask the RM office if any of these apply.

Step 3 • Check your division number

Look at your municipal assessment or property tax notice for the voting division indicated. If you recently moved, your property changed, or division boundaries changed, confirm with the RM office before voting.

Who is eligible to vote?

You must be a Canadian citizen, at least 18 years old on election day, AND meet an RM eligibility category, such as:

- Living in the RM for at least three consecutive months immediately before election day;
- Being a registered owner or assessed person for property in the RM;
- Qualifying as a permitted trailer/mobile-home occupant, eligible spouse, or designated chief executive officer of a qualifying assessed organization.

You may vote only once in the RM. Owning land in several divisions does not give you extra votes. In 2026, the regular RM councillor elections are for even-numbered divisions; voting occurs only where an election is required.

Not sure? Contact the RM office

Have your residential location and property tax or assessment notice handy. The RM can help you check which division applies. Bring acceptable identification when you vote and check the Notice of Poll for your polling location.
